Members of the National Association of Stationers and Manufacturers, after two days of entertainment and preliminary conferences, began formal sessions of their convention yesterday. At an early hour registration began and the figures, although not yet completed, showed by tonight that the convention is the largest in the history of the association.

At the morning session Mayor Ainslie welcomed the visitors to the city. The address was in happy vein and there was considerable balm between the Mayor and William P. Waddy, who replied for the stationers. Mr. Waddy declared that the Mayor had two speeches which he kept ready for welcoming conventions, but that he would vouch for the fact that the speech just delivered was a "brand new one."

Bauer, of Lynn, Mass.; and by the board of control and other bodies within the association.

Social features of the convention were again delightful. At 1 P. M. there was a stag luncheon in the palm court of the Jefferson Hotel. ## National Blouse Week Is Arranged

Novel Idea Promoted by Merchants of America for Women Buyers.

National Blouse Week! That's the very latest in the form of a shopping holiday, which, along with a diversified assortment of tag days, Richmond women are expected to take a lively interest in.

Several months ago there was held a national blouse week. It was such a tremendous success that it is being repeated in the form of a shopping holiday, which, along with a diversified assortment of tag days, Richmond women are expected to take a lively interest in.

Encouraged by the revenue producing qualities of these national cloth days, the merchants of America, that is, the kind that women used to call waists, have made up their minds they should have a national blouse day, being actuated by much the same spirit as those who have profitably conducted tag days in Richmond in recent months.

There is this difference, however. The national blouse week movement started in Canada. To make the event an international one, women of America have been invited to become parties to the scheme. The date for national blouse week is November 10 to 15, and the word has gone out that any woman needing a blouse will be privileged to buy it during that week.

TIMES-DISPATCH OPENS NEW FUND FOR STRICKEN FAMILY

Another Mother and Five Children
Face Starvation Unless Given
Help from Public.

Tales of personal heroism and great bravery of women on the firing line in the front trenches have been many times and have created much admiration, but there has seldom been a narrative related of a woman fighting against greater odds than those which a Richmond mother is now facing in a vain attempt to support her five little children and husband, the latter dangerously ill.

According to the reports, the husband and father of this family has been dangerously ill for five weeks and the physician in charge states that the patient will be unable to work until December, even under the most favorable conditions and in case no cure is effected.

With the care of her five children and the nursing of her husband to do his brave little woman found it almost impossible to do anything toward contributing toward the support of the family. When he was taken sick the husband had some small savings, but soon these were swamped by the truly mountainous expenses of the family.

In order to keep this woman from a physical breakdown and to furnish nourishing food for her babies and her husband, it is planned by The Times-Dispatch to raise a fund of $100 for their relief. The case will be known as No. 6. To do this will mean that the husband and father of this family will be able to support his family and the needy recovery of the husband. It is hoped to raise the fund within a week. This fund is now open for public contribution.
